 - a) Showing Junior Males 6-12 months of age

Often the search and find exploration for testicles at animal checks before the commencement of a show and again in the ring by the judge, become very invasive, stressful and even cruel. Males at this age are not expected to breed, yet they must prove they have the equipment. There is no such check on the fertility of females as their organs are internal. (as with many of the little boys).

Should it be necessary at this young age to prove their manhood.

If this showing rule was altered, what would be the ramification? Would Junior Males be entitled to stand in a supreme line up?
